LITERATURE.

HARPER'S MAGAZINE.

Harper's Magazine for June is an unusually varied number, profusely and beautifully illustrated. The frontispiece (illustrating "Faustus"—a poem by E. A. Abbey. Mrs. Z. B. Gustafson contributes an article, finely illustrated, on Lambeth Palace, the residence of the archbishop of Canterbury, "the primate of all England." Colonel Higginson continues his American history series, treating in this number—under the title of "The Hundred Years' War"—the numerous conflicts from 1662 to 1763 between the colonists and the Indians and French. The tendency now apparent on the part of art connoisseurs and dealers toward the Indian in place of the Mongolian type is the occasion of an exceedingly interesting article on the subject of "Indian Art in Metal and Wood," by J. L. Kipling, curator of the Central Museum, Lahore, and director of the Mayo School of Art. The article is fully illustrated by pictures representing the best work of the Hindu artificers. Ernest Ingersoll contributes an article, splendidly illustrated, called "The Home of Hiawatha," describing Minnesota, and giving special attention to the milling industry at Minneapolis. William C. Wyckoff's paper entitled "Sunlight Mysteries" is the first popular exposition that has been made of the results of Professor Langley's experiments at Alleghany and Mount Whitney. These experiments relate to the sun's light and heat, and the results reached are very remarkable and suggestive. H. Sutherland Edwards contributes the first of two papers on the Romanoff's—bringing the history of that dynasty down to the reign of Alexander II. The paper is illustrated by thirteen portraits. Titus Munson Coan, M.D., contributes a very important paper on Carlsbad waters, with reference to their medicinal qualities, and the various classes of invalids benefitted by them. The new novel, "A Castle in Spain," illustrated by Abbey, promises to be a wholesome and popular farce. It will be to most readers a welcome relief from the tedious psychological studies now so prevalent in the literature of fiction. Mrs. Spofford contributes a short story, "The Mount of Sorrow;" Charles Reade a humorous sketch entitled "Rus;" and "A Working Girl," a brief but interesting story entitled "An Aesthetic Idea." Poems are contributed by Annie Fields, Miss A. A. Bassett, S. S. Conant, Geo. E. Montgomery, and John B. Tabb. To this varied table of contents is added the always timely and interesting matter in the Editor's Easy Chair, Literary and Historical Records, and Drawer.

TRAVEL.

We are in receipt of the current number of Travel, a monthly magazine for the use of travelers, published at 162 Broadway, New York, by the American Exchange in Europe (Limited), of which Senator Joseph R. Hawley is president, and Henry F. Gillig, general manager. It is an elegant and most effective publication. The cover and the elaborate maps are the best work of the kind, and the text is of equal excellence. It contains all sorts of interesting and valuable notes for travelers; information about manners and customs, and a large number of skeleton routes in Great Britain, France, Germany, Switzerland, the Spanish and Italian Peninsula, the Orient, and around the World. It is edited by C. A. Barattini, the experienced traveler and manager.

ATLANTIC MONTHLY.

A store of good things are contained in the June number of the Atlantic Monthly, and it does credit, as usual, to Mr. Aldrich's taste in selection. The third and last act of Henry James' clever dramatization of "Daisy Miller," is continued in it, and also the conclusion of Miss Sarah Orne Jewett's story, "A Landless Farmer," a contribution in her pleasantest vein. Perhaps the most noticeable things in the number are a poem by Whittier, "How the women went from Dover," a stirring ballad of the old days of Quaker persecution in New England, and a paper entitled "Mr. Emerson in the Lecture Room," reminiscences of the great thinker's lectures delivered at Harvard College in 1870. Charles Dudley Warner has a sketch on Monserrat, written in his usual happy manner. Mr. Richard Grant White contributes the first part of an international paper, "Mr. Washington Adams in England," in which he will succeed in setting off the peculiarities of our compatriots as they appear abroad, as well as making some clever hits at our British cousins. "Bridget's Story," by L. C. Wyman, "The Biography of Two Famous Songs," by Amelia Barr, a gossiping and attractive article on "Table Talk," by F. C. Taylor, and "Life in Old Siena," E. D. R. Bianchi, add to the variety and general brightness of the contents, while timely and thoughtful essays on "Morality in the Public Schools" and "Authorship in America," form the pieces de resistance of the number. A poem or two, together with the usual excellent critiques on recent books, and the well-known Contributors' Club, a feature of steadily increasing popularity, complete a very noticeable number. Houghton, Mifflin & Co., Boston.

MODERN AGE.

The June number of The Modern Age is dated from New York City, and notwithstanding its change of habitat seems to be fully up to the standard of previous issues. The number opens with an excellent story by Halevy, entitled, "A Love Marriage." This is followed by the second installment of Lindau's novel, "The Californians," which is proving to be a powerful and interesting production. "Canada and Annexation," and "Irish Murder-Societies," are well handled in two articles under those heads, the latter by Richard Pigott. Paul Heyse is famous on the continent of Europe as a writer of romances, and his name is rapidly becoming well known on this side of the water. His story entitled, "Ninoland and Maso," now for the first time given to the American public, is a good example of his vivid style of narration. "Mr. Almayne's Escape" is entertaining, and the editorial departments show the usual brightness and good judgment.
